

SENATOR HIGGINS: Are you supposed to stand up?

SPEAKER NICHOL: You are supposed to turn your light off after you have spoken.

SENATOR HIGGINS: I have never spoken yet. I didn't intend to speak on this. I intended to yield the time to...

SPEAKER NICHOL: Let's you and I visit about this after this but we have done exactly according to Hoyle and exactly according to the way the lights have come on. Now simply because the debate is ceased doesn't give me authority to call on you (interruption).

SENATOR HIGGINS: I don't want to talk, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to say I was going to yield the time to Senator Smith. She wanted more time. I don't understand why all the other speakers have been recognized, some of them more than once.

SPEAKER NICHOL: Your point is made but I don't diddle around up and I don't want you to accuse me of that because I don't do it. I call them in their regular order so I want that understood with you and everyone else in here. I don't do that. I never have.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, smiling, I didn't accuse you of that. There is a Page that sits next to you. She may have missed it.

SPEAKER NICHOL: No, she didn't. I will defend her on that.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Well, then all I can say, something is wrong with the machines because I just this second shut my light off.

SPEAKER NICHOL: No, the lights are right the way they are and this young lady, I watch her, and she doesn't cheat either.

SENATOR HIGGINS: I did not accuse her of cheating. I said she could make a mistake, Mr. Speaker.

SPEAKER NICHOL: Your point is taken and made and all that so we will go on with the business. Where were we, Mr. Clerk? Yes, we are going to call the roll on the
